

Journal of High Technology Law

Our journal provides the legal community with a source of relevant and timely information on legal issues involving new technologies and intellectual property. In addition to preparing articles for publication, JHTL staff members write a Note on a technology-related topic. Each member also reviews a current book in the field. All book reviews will be published.

While many of our members have science backgrounds, we encourage anyone with an interest in patent, trademark, copyright, trade secrets, or technology law to apply.

Among the five Honor Boards at Suffolk, the Journal of High Technology Law is currently ranked:

#2 in total number of citations

#1 in number of citations per article
